Request Description
When a user wants to create a post, the system should provide a template by category. This template should include category-specific fields as well as a date element, a check box indicating the urgency of the situation, and a title/description field.
Justification
Dividing posts by category and presenting users templates according to it is important to be able to impose a loose sorting of posts, making it easier down the line for categorizing. On top of this, it will be much more convenient for the user to fill out what they need and not where they don't.
Effect if declined (Risk if the project request is declined)
A singular, generic template will be provided to the user. This means there will be no categorization, and that means any requirements needing this categorization will have to implement it somewhere else.
